

When electing the President... ...winners should win.

...especially when it comes to elections. In our country's 56 presidential elections, the candidate who lost the national popular vote has won the presidency four times. That's 1 in 14, all thanks to the "winner take all" rule for awarding electoral votes.

The "winner take all" rule is written nowhere in the Constitution. It isn't in any federal law. It's not even the rule in every state. A recent poll suggests 67% of Pennsylvania residents don't support it.

Now, there is a plan to change it. The Support Popular Vote Initiative will guarantee the presidency to the winner of the popular vote in all fifty states. This plan will ensure Pennsylvania has a voice in every election now, and in the future. Hawaii, Washington, Illinois, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey and the District of Columbia have already joined the compact.

It's time for Pennsylvania to add its voice to the discussion. Join us on Facebook at www.facebook.com/NationalPopularVotePA.
